

Girl, 5, Watches In Horror As Assailant Shoots Mother, Uncle

CINCINNATI BUREAU
A five-year-old girl looked on in horror last week, as an armed assailant shot her mother and uncle, with a handgun. The two victims of the shooting, which took place in basement of a house at 1414 Carolina Ave., in Bond Hill were reported in guarded condition, following the shooting.

According to witnesses a 27-year-old man is to blame for the shooting and one police officer said the man has four different aliases.

In critical condition was Brenda Baker, 21; her brother Arnold, 23, listed as being in fair condition.

Mrs. Baker's five-year-old daughter, who was not wounded, was with her mother and uncle when the shooting happened.

Virginia Smith, who lives at 1409 Carolina Ave. was waxing her car when she heard people arguing and when she looked up, Arnold Baker was staggering across the street.

Baker sat down in a chair in her living room spraying blood on it, on a rug and on the curtains; then he got up and moved to a front porch chair.

At Mrs. Smith's request, her next door neighbor, Eloise Von Hoene, called police. When police got to the scene, and led Baker from the porch, Mrs. Von Hoene heard him say, "Go over in the basement. There's girls and fellows over there." His sister Brenda Baker was taken to General Hospital.

After more than an hour, relatives came to get her daughter.

According to Tom Ober-schmidt, homicide sergeant there were four (Continued on Page 8A)

Educators Retire From School System

Several black educators are on the 1977 retirement list from the Columbus Public Schools.

They include Frances White, retiring coordinator of volunteer services; Lucien Wright, director of the Department of Human Relations; William M. Wood, home-school-community agent; Boery Junior High; Ruth Burns Wilson, intermediate language development teacher; Helen Taylor, pre-kindergarten teacher; Trevitt elementary; William Jenkins, principal retired 1976 Clearbrook Elementary; Flora Branham, Medina Junior High and Edward Abercrombie, leave of absence.

Frances White became a member of the Columbus Public School staff in March 1956, when she was assigned to the Public Personnel Department as visiting teacher. In 1968, she was transferred to the office of community relations in the Department of Human Relations.

In the fall of 1969, White organized and provided the leadership for the volunteer services program, which has steadily grown and expanded throughout the

White is a graduate of East High School and Ohio State University, where she earned a bachelor's degree in social administration and later, teaching certification.

Prior to joining the Columbus school system, professional experience in public service included serving as one of the first three juvenile police-women in the city of Columbus.

White is married to Atty. David D. White, a senior member of the law offices of Bell, White, Saunders and Roy.

Prior to his appointment as director of human relations, Lucien Wright served as principal of Garfield, Clearbrook, Leonard and Felton elementaries. He was also a teacher at Mt. Vernon Ave. Elementary.

He is a graduate of Ohio State University and East High School.

Wright and his wife, Phyllis A., are parents of four children: Jacqueline Y. Sloan, first grade teacher at Eastgate Elementary School; Howard M. Addison, senior, Ohio State University.

Eastside Man Gunned Down, Wanted On 2 Felony Charges

An Eastside man who was shot on Saturday in a domestic dispute, and was, as of Tuesday, being held in University hospital under guard, is the same person that police have been seeking since February 1976 on misdemeanor and felony charges.

Marvin Fears, 31, of 1441 Madison Ave., has eluded police for the past year. Bonnie Jackson, who police claim shot Fears late Saturday at the Madison Ave. residence, helped to expose the suspect's past. Fears was shot in the right eye and left arm. He was listed in satisfactory condition Tuesday.

The misdemeanor counts,

MARVIN FEARS
...wanted on charges

one charge each of petty theft and assault, were filed by Jackson, 31, in early 76 - the same woman who allegedly shot Fears. She claimed Fears beat her Feb. 29, 1976, and stole a small amount of money from her. During the Saturday night altercation, police said that she received minor cuts and bruises, and was released, following treatment, from Grant Hospital.

The felony counts that Fears faces are two charges of aggravated robbery, which go back to March 27.

James McDaniel Jr., of 565 S. Wheatland Ave. and Charles Farthing of 975

Sullivan Ave. accused Fears of taking more than $250 from them at gun-point.

In another shooting, an Eastside woman remained in critical condition (as of Tuesday) the result of an assault which occurred at Franklin Pk. South at Nelson Rd. on June 20.

Lillie Barnett, 38, 842 S. 17th was admitted to St. Anthony's hospital with one gunshot wound in the right arm and two in the abdomen. Although no arrest had been made as of Tuesday, police list T.C. Miller, 55, 1781 E. Rich St. as a prime suspect. No motive has been given in the shooting.

'NO BINGO, NO SCHOOL' SAYS CATHOLIC PRIEST

By C.A. BRYCE JR.

Black and white parents and Catholic parish officials picketed the State House Tuesday to urge passage of a bill which would, they hope, close a loophole in the state's bingo laws and shut down "Las Vegas" style operations which are threatening their schools with financial ruin.

The demonstrators, representing St. Gabriel School, 2112 Mock Rd., carried signs reading, "Salt and Pepper—that's the way we like it" and "Black is Beautiful, So is St. Gabriel's, that's why we like it," and "Bingo, St. Las Vegas, No," among other messages.

The subject of their concern was Senate Bill 104, a proposed amendment to the state's bingo laws. The bill, which the Catholic school parents support, would close a loophole that allows a seven-nights-a-week legalized gambling operation to flourish in their neighborhood, siphoning off players from their own bingo games, a priest explained.

The Rev. William Patterson, of St. Gabriel, said the Union Station arcade in Northern Lights Shopping Center has established a legal "Las Vegas" operation that threatens to drive the church's bingo games out of business. And if the bingo goes, so does the school, the priest said.

"No bingo, no school," Rev. Patterson said.

Patterson, whose school has an enrollment that is 70 percent black, ex-

CONCERNED PARENTS—Rosemary Martin, left, and Edna Bates, parents of students at St. Gabriel School, 2112 Mock Road, were among parents and school officials who appeared at the State House Tuesday to urge passage of Senate Bill 104, which, they hope, will eliminate "amusement only" bingo operations which drain needed funds away from the parochial school system.

Black Action Ministry Invites Observance Of Desegregation Weekend

The Black Action Ministry (BAM) of Columbus has invited Columbus' religious community to observe Desegregation Weekend on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 1, 2, and 3, in preparation for the celebration of Independence Day.

Although the weekend precedes an anti-busing rally planned by the Ku Klux Klan for the afternoon of July 4, on the grounds of the Capital Building, BAM convenor Rev. Leon Troy said it was not intended to counteract the rally.

Joining Troy in announcing the Desegregation Weekend at a press conference were the Rev. John Frazier, executive director of the Metropolitan Area Church Board; Rabbi Roger Klein, of Congregation Beth Tikvah, a member of the Coalition of Religious Congregations; (COC) Bishop George Fulcher of the Catholic Diocese, Chairperson of the Metropolitan Area Church Board; and the Rev. A. Wilson Wood of Bethany Baptist Church, president of the Baptist Pastors' Conference. Rev. Troy is minister of the Second Baptist Church.

The purpose of the weekend, according to Troy, is to seek unity and to make the community aware that "we all have one thing in common, our responsibility to the children."

The group encouraged clergy and members of congregations to become well informed about the history of the Columbus school system, the legal aspects of the trial and the opinion issued by the Court. Copies of the reprints of the CALL POST's series of articles on the history of segregation in Columbus schools were handed out to members of the press.

Suggested ways in which the weekend might be observed included special prayers and sermons, teaching sessions, dialogue periods, counseling sessions and calling for volunteers to work for peace.

NAACP: 21 Schools 'Whiter' Under City Plan

By MICKI SELTZER

Citing figures that show that 21 schools would become "whiter" under the Columbus board's desegregation plan than they were previously, attorneys for the NAACP asked U.S. District Judge Robert M. Duncan to throw out the plan as unconstitutional at a meeting of attorneys in the suit in the judge's chambers on Monday.

Instead, scheduled hearings on the plan to begin on Monday, July 11, at 9 a.m.

NAACP Atty. Richard Stein told the CALL-POST he had suggested to the judge that he send the plan back to the school board to modify it to include all the schools, and then hold the hearings.

Stein said he is concerned about the waste of time that will take place if

Aspects of City Plan Called 'Bad Education'

By MICKI SELTZER

The Columbus school board plan for desegregating the schools includes features that are bad education and bad for the future of the city, according to an Ohio State University educator.

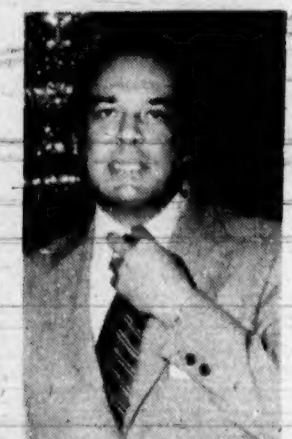

Dr. William Wayson, professor of educational development, was critical of several aspects of the plan.

Putting together two low socio-economic schools creates in the public mind a second class school, Wayson told the CALL-POST in an interview by telephone.

While it may not be unconstitutional to discriminate against people because they're poor, he said, it's bad education and bad for the future of the city. Better education is the goal and the school plan.

KEYNOTER — U.S. District Judge Robert M. Duncan will be the keynote speaker for the recognition banquet for Lucien (Buz) Wright, set for Wednesday, June 29, at the Carrousel Inn, 4800 Sinclair Rd., at 6:30 p.m. Wright is retiring as director of human relations for the Columbus Public Schools after 42 years of service with the school system. Tickets are available at Swan Cleaners, Mt. Vernon and St. Clair, and Willie Beauty Suppliers, 1506 E. Long St., and 1484 E. Livingston Ave.

Conference Set On Black Women

Our Lives, Ourselves: Black Women in Double Jeopardy will be the topic for a weekend conference on black women June 24-26 at the Black Studies Community Extension Center, 657 S. Ohio Ave.

The OSU Black Studies Department will sponsor the event, set for 8:30 to 10 p.m. on Friday, June 24; 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Saturday, June 25; and 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Sunday, June 26.

The conference will address issues such as the relevance of women's liberation to black women, black men and black women, black women and public policy, concepts of femininity and images of black women in the media. In lectures and small group discussions, participants will be encouraged to explore issues surrounding the roles and values that shape the lives of black women in American society.

Speakers will be Tuallia Hamilton OSU assistant professor of black studies and history; Rhonda Rivera, OSU assistant professor of law; Curtina Moreland, OSU assistant professor of black studies and political science; Barbara Meecham, OSU assistant professor of black studies; Adrienne Hoard, OSU assistant professor of black studies and art and Linda James, OSU assistant professor of black studies and psychology.

Individuals interested in participating should call the OSU Black Studies Department at 422-3700.

Law Enforcement Project Seeking Street Patroller

The Citizens Crime Reporting Project (CCRP), operating on a $155,333 federal grant, needs several part-time workers to implement the program, according to Dr. Kenneth Eye, sub-contractor of the project.

The Law Enforcement Assistance Act, (LEAA), is providing 90 percent of the grant, with the State of Ohio and the City of Columbus responsible for five percent each.

The project is designed to crackdown on the upsurging criminal acts in the Ohio State University area. Regarded as one of the highest crime areas in the city, CCRP is seeking men and women to patrol the university district and serve primarily as "crime watchers."

The city patrol officers will receive $2.50 per hour on a 20 hour week assignment. CCRP also has openings for five project coordinators who will receive $3.50 per hour on a 20 hour work week.

To be eligible for either patrol or coordinator, according to Dr. Eye, applicants must be at least 18, able to walk for four hours, complete three days of training, have no felony record and be a resident or have close ties with the university district. Applicants must also sign a contract to remain on the job for at least six months.

During their four hour tour of duty, the patrol must keep a sharp lookout for "crimes against persons, property, burglaries, rape, assaults, auto thefts and crime in general," Eye said.

While the patrolmen will keep their eyes peeled for criminal action, they cannot make arrests. The job is strictly "non-intervention," Eye emphasized.

The only weapon the patrolmen will carry, it a Walkie Talkie radio with a special frequency. Should they spot a crime in action, they are to contact their coordinator by radio and report the incident. The coordinator will determine whether to report the incident to Columbus Police or not.

All patrolmen will wear a patch symbol to identify themselves, Eye said. They will cover an approximately 150 square block area. It is bounded by High St., west, the Penn-Central Railroad, east, Eighth Ave., south and 19th Ave. north.

Persons who feel that they can qualify and are interested in joining up with the project, should contact the programs temporary headquarters at 140 E. 12th Ave., 294-1611.

LETTER STATES:

Teacher Agreement Lacks Protection For Minorities

In a letter to the editor of the CALL-POST, three area teachers related their concerns about the desegregation of Columbus teachers.

The letter, signed by Catherine Willis, teacher at Trevitt Elementary, Marcia P. Washington, teacher at Easthaven Elementary, and Shirley W. Young, teacher at Kent Elementary, reads as follows:

The assignment of teachers in any school system is a very important activity. It becomes even more important when, and if, our schools are to become racially unidentifiable.

In Columbus, the desegregation of teachers should have occurred with the implementation of an agreement between the Ohio Civil Rights Commission and the Columbus Board of Education. Many observers find fault with that agreement in that it effectively removed experienced and concerned black teachers from black students while at the same time denying employment to new black teachers since "white" schools were only required to accept a token number of black teachers.

A close reading of the Agreement between the Columbus Board of Education and the Columbus Teachers Association (CEA) reveals that minority teachers are not protected from "tokenism," massive layoffs, nor equitability in assignments.

All of the above has considerable negative impact upon black children. Without student desegregation, teacher assignments were made in such a manner as to provide token desegregation and the removal of black teachers from predominantly black schools.

The paramount question for teacher association leaders and school administrators, now that student desegregation is being planned for is: Will new policies provide for the equitable distribution of minority staff throughout the school system? Or, will

VISITING GUESTS - Covington, Ky., a Cincinnati neighbor, can always be counted upon to be represented at Ohio Elks convention. The above unit, The Ways and Means Fez Club, No. 1, is an affiliate of Meadowlark Temple No. 731.

WEARY ... BUT STILL GOING was this youth unit of Capital City Temple No. 231, Columbus, as they neared the reviewing stand after the five mile hike.

VICTORY KISS - Bertram Brewer, director of convention, plants a big kiss on the cheek of Sandra Bass, his hometown talent after presenting her with a bouquet of American Beauty Roses.

Big Parade Caps Elks 56th State Convention

By JOHN B. COMBS

The 56th Ohio State Association of the Improved Benevolent Protective Order of Elks of the World, (IBPOE Of W), which convened here last week, climaxed Sunday afternoon with a sparkling street parade that was viewed by hundreds of cheering spectators as a variety of colorful attired drill units pranced gracefully to the music of crack marching band and drum corps.

Although all of the other activities of the five day convention were held at the downtown Neil House Hotel, the black community gave the brothers and daughters a rousing welcome from the first roll of the drum until the parade broke rank in front of Franklin Lodge No. 203 at Monroe Ave. and Long St. late Sunday afternoon.

In addition to Franklin Lodge, the association was hosted by Capital City Temple No. 231, Orlentangy Lodge No. 521 and Martin Luther King Temple No. 1216. They rolled out the welcome mat and the brothers and daughters accepted the courtesy with demonstrated appreciation.

Aside from the business sessions, the Wednesday night Oratorical Contest, the Beauty and Talent Pageant and the numerous balls were the major attractions involving the public.

The Oratorical Contest, which was attended by Gov. James A. Rhodes, featured three contestants. When the exciting speeches were over, Lynn Moore, an attractive Middletown girl was crowned the winner. David Stanford, Akron was first runnerup with Thelma Roach, Newark, taking third place.

With the famous Arthur Prysock big band featuring Red Prysock on Saxophone providing the music, the Beauty and Talent Pageant proved to have been the major attraction.

But in addition to Prysock's music, the pageant paraded a bevy of eight attractive talented contestants that brought raves of attention from the crowd of several hundred.

The contest, operating on the Miss America formula, including bathing suits, evening gowns, personal talent demonstrations and finally questions laid before each girl from sealed envelopes.

When the final skit was over, the judges decisions were as follows: First place, Sandra Bass, Cleveland, first runnerup, Georgia Ann Hearn, Cincinnati and second runnerup, Mary J. Turner, Cincinnati.

The first place winner was awarded a $500 scholarship and a chance to compete in the Beauty and Talent Pageant during the Elks National Convention in Washington, D.C. in August. The first and second runnerups received $250 and $100 scholarship awards respectively.

The election of officers on Saturday concluded the business active of the convention. Mizell Stewart, Youngstown, was reelected State President, while Mrs. Evelyn B. King of Cleveland was retained as State Daughter President. Both presidents respective cabinets were also reelected.

The State Associations Grand Ball on Saturday evening closed out the closing session the Youngstown for the 1978 convention. During the delegates chose association meeting site.

ORATORICAL CONTESTANT - Lynn Moore, third from the left, was all smiles after winning the oratorical contest. She is flanked from the left by State President Mizell Stewart, Fred Young, Director of Education, Ms. Moore, first runnerup, David Stanford, Akron, Thelma Roach, Newark, third place and Clarence Ramsey, Columbus, Central District Education Director.

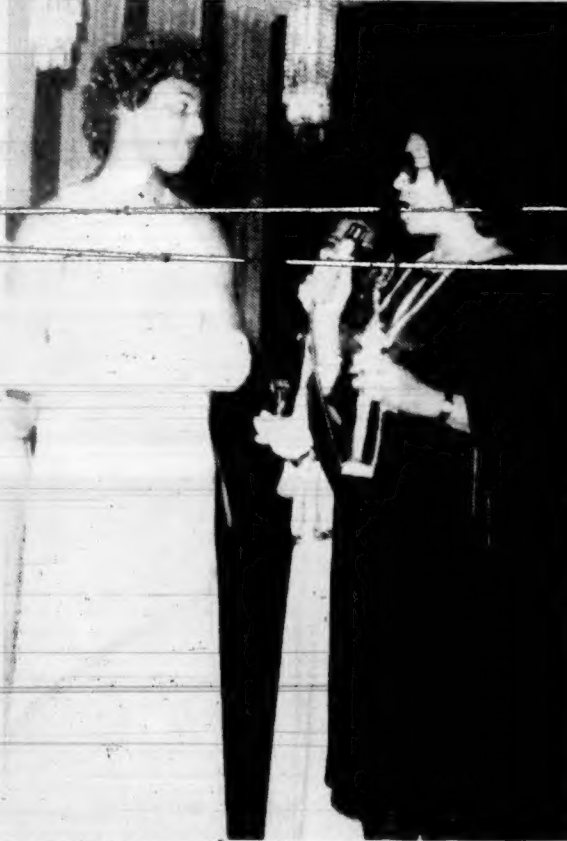

AWARD PRESENTATION - State President Mizell Stewart congratulates Sandra Bass on her Beauty and Talent Pageant victory prior to presenting her with a trophy.

SOUNDING OFF - Girl drill teams refused to take a back seat their male counterparts, gracefully exercised their marching routine as they approached the reviewing stand during the Elks parade last Sunday.

MORE YOUTHS - The Martha Manson Drill unit of Canton, helped to swell the youth drilling aggregations to a record breaking number at the Elks State Convention last Sunday.

FIRST RUNNER-UP - State Daughter President Evelyn B. King salutes Georgia Ann Hearn of Cincinnati, first runnerup in the Beauty and Talent Pageant.

DOING THEIR THING - This young girl drill team puts on a stylish show as they pranced before the reviewing stand to the drum music of a Toledo youth drum corps.

DIGNITARIES - State President Mizell Stewart, center, left, and Judge Perry S. Jackson, retired Common Pleas Court Judge of Cuyahoga County, and other top Elks officials and special guests, review the exciting parade.

A PARADE PAUSE - Sandra Bass smiles beautifully as the crowd cheered her during the mammoth parade last Sunday.

A Meaningful Job

Professional boxers Vonzell Johnson, Richard Rozell, Pete Seward and Forrest Winchester were all invited to Mayor Tom Moody's offices on Monday so he could personally wish them well in their home boxing careers, which were launched on Wednesday at Cooper Arena. So proud of Johnson and Rozelle was the Mayor - they are both nationally ranked - that he bestowed upon them trophy-like statues of Christopher Columbus, the world renowned explorer who never got boxed in.

Following the formalities of introductions, the Mayor got around to saying what he wanted to say all along. "I'm glad that professional boxing is coming to Columbus and do hope that the Columbus people support it enthusiastically." Promoter Henry Grooms said he is sure the sport will survive here because of the top ranked talent, and his talented fighters quietly agreed to give the fans all their money's worth.

Although the Mayor admitted that he is still learning the difference between a punch and a jab, his political mind was keenly whipped across the room. "You," he said in speaking directly to the fighters, "can have a profound effect on race relations in this city during the next year." The Mayor continued: "I don't know of anything better than sports that does a better job of bringing people of all races, together in harmony."

Now, I didn't exactly duck that line, but I blocked some of the blandness. Athletics, paradoxically, has been one of the magnets of human togetherness. Conversely, events that need to be settled on mental fortitude and understanding - Moody referred of course to the upcoming school desegregation case - cannot be handled with the swift grace of a sporting event. Human nature is indeed confusing. But the point the Mayor was trying to bring home, I think, was a fine one. If Johnson, Rozelle, Seward and Winchester give people role models - white and black and yellow - then perhaps color differences will be transcended into harmony and likeness. That, in turn, might be conveyed in the classroom. Know the four boxers personally, and their personal characteristics are all impeccable, they could very well end up helping Columbusans realize that we all shall live in peace together, or go down with the inevitable bell that stops every fight at one point or another.

The Columbus Clippers came off the road Thursday, June 23, to open a six-day, seven-game home stand at Franklin County Stadium. The visitors include Rochester and Tidewater. The Red Wing series is just a short two-game set to be played on Thursday and Friday nights. Thursday, June 23, the Clips will hold their fifth Family night, a very popular promotion at the stadium. Youngsters with their "Clipper Crew Cards" are admitted free when accompanied by a paying adult. Then on Friday, June 24, it's Childhood League Night, and the Clippers are donating a monetary portion of all advanced tickets sold to the Childhood League.

Wilma Rudolph, a 1960 triple Olympic gold medal winner whose spectacular early career will be chronicled in a forthcoming NBC World Premiere movie, inducted her mentor, Tennessee State track coach Ed Temple, into the Black Hall of Fame on June 18.

Temple, acknowledged as one of the nation's most successful women's track coaches, is currently an associate professor of Sociology at Tennessee State.

Tennis Fans in Columbus will have a complete tennis guide available to them this summer - compliments of Gold Circle Stores. There will be 25,000 guides, free of charge, that will detail such information as where to play tennis free, where to play in the city at night under lights, a map of all public courts in Columbus and how you can enter the Gold Circle Central Ohio Tennis Tournament.

Produced in conjunction with the Recreation and Parks Dept., the guide can be obtained in sporting goods departments of all Gold Circle Stores; the Recreation and Parks Office, 1800 Franklin Park South; and various city recreational centers.

TRIBE SACKS FIELD BOSS SPORTS POLL SHOWS SENTIMENT FAVORED MGR. FRANK ROBINSON

Cleveland baseball fans have one less Black face to cheer, this week, as Manager Frank Robinson was sacked by General Manager Phil Seghi.

The club which brought the first Black to the American League, now finds itself with a small collection of benchwarmers and also runs where such outstanding talents like Larry Doby, Satchell Paige, Luke Easter, Al Smith, Mudcat Grant, Louis Tiant and Chris Chambliss used to star.

The public pulse was taken recently in a poll by the Call and Post to determine what the public thought—and felt—about the sudden dismissal of Robinson.

In summary what was being said was that Robinson was not given enough of a chance, that firing him would not solve the team's problems and actually was a type of blessing in disguise for Robinson.

Some people said that Phil Seghi, owner of the team was at fault for hiring what some called a "farm-club" team group of players, a group of cry-babies.

Others claimed it was the fact that relations between Robinson and the players were not good, and made the public image of the team less wholesome, weakening both morale on the field as well as in the stands.

A few people thought that Robinson was arrogant and not so lenient with the team as he should have been. Most people feel, though, that he will go elsewhere, and get better results than he's received here in Cleveland. One baseball diard says he's heard that Frank Robinson might manage the New York Yankees.

To check the knowledgeability of those who were polled, they were asked if they knew how many Blacks were on the team, 45% of those quizzed were accurate to within more or less one player (we have a count of five players, counting Spanish as well) of those participating.

The largest percentage (50%) made guesses that were cautious but some were wild—this group said that there were between seven and fifteen players on the team. The smallest group hit the answer on the head, and amounted to five percent of the spectators and speculators.

It's possible that one man summed it up when he said: "Very small stuff—That covers the whole thing."

Old Timers Set Reunion

Wright retires with 42 years of service with the Columbus School system. He will be honored at a retirement banquet June 29 at the Carrousel Inn.

William M. Wood began teaching in 1942 at Pilgrim Elementary and has taught at Champion Junior High, Monroe Junior High, and Beery Junior High. Subjects taught have included mathematics, shop and physical education. He became a home-school community agent at Beery six months ago.

Wood holds a B.S. degree from Ohio State University and 45 additional credit hours.

Also a photographer, Wood resides at 1045 Geers Ave., with his wife, Hazel, and daughter, Teena, who will enter her senior year at South in the fall.

Ruth Burns Wilson retires as an intermediate language development teacher after a 41-year career in education.

She joined the Columbus school district in 1937 as an English and history teacher at the junior high level. During the '50s, she requested and was granted a transfer to teach in the elementary grades.

In 1966, Wilson was one of 39 teachers chosen to pilot the Title I reading improvement project. She was assigned to Pilgrim and Maryland Park Elementary Schools.

Wilson lives on Sharon Woods Blvd. with her husband, Jimmie. They have two children, J. Riley Wilson II and Nadya W. Kwakernaak, and two granddaughters.

Helen Taylor joined the Columbus school system in the Title I pre-kindergarten program at Trevitt Elementary in January 1967. Prior to that, she served 13 years with Paxey's Play School.

Taylor began her teaching career in Jacksonville, Florida, as a senior high home economics teacher. She retrained as an elementary teacher at Capital University. She received her original degree at Florida A & M.

She resides at 256 Sherbourne Dr. Her daughter, Flora Glenn, is a teacher at Bellows Elementary.

the power of prayer. One weekend can make a tremendous impact on the city of Columbus and the mind of the world at large."

Wood said he was "not that much concerned" about the Ku Klux Klan rally.

Also commenting on the rally was Bishop Fulcher who noted that because busing is an emotional issue, people who would never consider going to a KKK rally might do so on this issue. He said it was the responsibility of the pastor to counsel against this and that no Catholic could be a member of the KKK if they considered what the group stands for.

Fulcher said the Catholic diocese is considering plans for improving integration at their schools.

Asked what position CORC was taking on the desegregation plans submitted to the court, Rabbi Klein said the group gave input on the plan and is now assessing the plans and will wait until Judge Duncan makes a judgment.

In addition to the weekend, the Black Action Ministry plans to seek ways to help in the process of implementation such as interpreting the role of the church as it relates to the final plan, stimulating parent participation in school life, providing assistance in problems of discipline, recruiting tutors and monitoring transportation.

Troy noted that as a former school board member in Warren, Ohio, he found that it was useful to plan events where parents would get together. When children understand their parents know each other, he noted, it reduces tension.

What Desegregation Weekend is all about, Troy said, is "desegregating your heart."

"I don't know of any school system that has shut down because it was ordered to desegregate," Troy added.

In addition to Troy and Wood, persons listed as members of the Black Action Ministry were Rev. Jerome Ross, president, The Baptist Ministerial Alliance, Elder Jethro Lester, president, The Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, Rev. Rhenetta Davis, president-elect, The Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, Rev. Cameron Jackson, president, Operation PUSH, and Rev. N. Spencer Glover and Rev. Grady Doughty Sr., communicators. Listed as consultants were Frazier and Frank Lomax, executive director of the Columbus Urban League.

MRS. EDNA L. BYRCE, well-known businesswoman and civic leader, will be among the readers of the poetry of the late Paul Laurence Dunbar at a celebration of the poet's birthday Monday, June 27, at 7:30 p.m., at the Paul Laurence Dunbar Cultural Arts Center, 272 S. 'No Bingo, No School' Says Priest plained that the weekly bingo games at the church provide a substantial portion of the school's annual operating budget.

Before the state's bingo laws were amended last year, he said, the parish sometimes took in as much as $1,000 per night. Since the laws were liberalized and the Union Station setup went into competition with them, the school's weekly handle has dropped to nearly nothing.

In fact, the priest said, this past Monday night's bingo take at St. Gabriel was just that—nothing.

Last year, St. Gabriel netted approximately $150,000 from bingo. That sum allowed the school to lower tuition for non-Catholic students with the stipulation that non-Catholic parents would become active in supporting school activities.

"Without their bingo income, the school would have to boost tuitions in order to meet their annual budget. And parochial school officials are not sure that even a boost in tuition would save their schools from closing, if they could not count on the bingo profits."

The Union Station operation began three months ago and has effectively driven the church-run bingo games to the brink of ruin by offering seven nights a week of bingo and card games under charity sponsorship.

A call to Union Station was answered by a "Mr. Adler" who confirmed that the establishment runs blackjack games and bingo seven nights a week.

The legislation which made the Northern Lights operation possible was passed last year. It authorizes legitimate charities to stage two "Las Vegas" festivals each year. Such festivals may include special gambling gimmicks, poker and blackjack, and may be operated by independent entrepreneurs—if the entrepreneurs can prove they do not make a profit from the games.

State Rep. Les Brown, who witnessed Tuesday's demonstration, told the CALL & POST that he supports a change in the law which would, as he put it, "keep bingo in church where it belongs."

State Sen. Michael Schwartzwalder, to whom the St. Gabriel parents made a special appeal, said when contacted at his Statehouse office:

"I am certainly in favor of tightening up the bingo laws so as to prevent this sort of situation."

Schwartzwalder said he had not yet studied the most recent draft of the proposed bill, but stated that he was in favor of "the concept" of keeping charitable games of chance within narrow restrictions that would keep "opportunists and gangsters out of the bingo business."

"Mind you," the senator said, "I am not saying that this operation (Union Station) or any others is illegal or that the people behind it are crooks. But I am saying that the present law invites abuse."

S.B. 104 would amend the present law to restrict charitable bingo and other games of chance to locations which were either on the property of the charity sponsoring the games or on property leased or rented from the state government by the charitable sponsors.

That, the parishioners and parents at St. Gabriel hope, would put the Union Station/Northern Lights "casino" out of business and put their school back in the red.

Aspects of City Plan

board must constantly be paying attention to better education.

"The phasing plan," Wayson asserted, "delays the solution and increases instability in the schools and community. Experience around the country shows it is better to move with commitment and rapidly."

When school systems move quickly, he said, it gives people confidence in the decision. They know the decision is final and it reduces the possibility of panic buying and selling.

"Leaving all-white schools on the periphery of the city is questionable," Wayson said. "It's difficult to see how Northgate and Avalon could be justified as constitutional because they were built knowing they would be identifiable white. The plan itself indicates a desire to keep them identifiable white. It seems another indication of intent to continue segregated schools."

Wayson questioned the inclusion of programs such as the gifted program and staff development in the cost figures.

Those programs should be included in any well-run school system whether or not there is desegregation, he said.

He also questioned the breaking up of schools that are already integrated.

"They're penalizing people who were doing the right thing in the first place. It would be better to reward them by permitting them to remain in a stabilized school situation."

Wayson didn't see any problem with the distances involved if the already integrated schools were left out.

Once on a bus, they may as well move nine miles as one mile, he said. It's desirable to have fewer children riding, particularly when the district is this small.

Noting that the plan does not keep the same groups of students together when they go into junior and senior high, Wayson said this was an attempt to keep the amount of interracial contact at a minimum.

This is not educationally sound, he said. There should be as much stability as possible in staying with the same group of students. There's no need in introducing unnecessary instability.

Wayson said he is also concerned that there is no plan to readjust the plan. There should be a monitoring committee, and provisions to readjust the plan from year to year, he said.

21 Schools 'Whiter' Under City Plan

hearings are held on the plan as it now stands.

"The defendants have the burden of proof," he noted. "They have to prove the plan is constitutional and effective. I don't think they can do that. I'm concerned about the delay."

Stein's figures show that of the 24 schools not involved in the proposed plan, 22 are identifiably white both before and after the plan and 21 are made whiter in racial composition than they were under the 1976 Columbus Plan transfer program.

In addition, 17 would have a smaller percent of black students under the plan than the percent that would be at the schools without the Columbus Plan. Ridgeview Junior High, for example, had 8.4 percent black in 1976 with the Columbus Plan, would have had 4.7 percent black without the Columbus Plan and would have 2.2 percent black under the proposed plan.

The proposed plan does allow for voluntary transfers that could increase those percentages.

Duncan will meet again with attorneys in the case on July 8 for a pre-hearing consultation. An educational expert will be hired to advise the court on educational aspects of the plans.

TERMINATION OF PARENTAGE NOTICE

In the Superior Court of the State of Delaware, in and For Kent County In the Matter of a Child of notice born June 3, 1971.

TO: Daniel Mathis, late of 1570 Southfield Drive, Columbus, Ohio.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that Jacqueline Rose Jackson has filed a petition under the provisions of 13 Del. No. 1107 alleging that you have abandoned and not supported your child born June 3, 1971. This Court is requested to terminate your parental rights in said child.

A hearing in this proceeding will be held at the Court house at Dover, Delaware on Friday, the 1st day of July 1977, at 10:00 A.M. o'clock.

You are directed to show cause, at said hearing why your parental rights in said child should not be terminated, as provided by the statute.

Failure on your part to appear as directed may result in the court's granting the relief sought and termination of your parental rights in said child.

people in the basement at the time of the shooting.

Mrs. Hoene said: "I've lived here 31 years and I've never seen anything like it. There's too many young people going in the basement in the daytime.

They come in and they go. It isn't natural. That's an in-and-out-house over there. I'm scared."

As for the motive of the shooting, some police officers said it was a domestic quarrel. Sgt. Oberschmidt said he didn't know the motive for it.

360 Women Liquor Store Workers Reflects EEO

Twenty years ago, Margarette Washington never dreamed that someday she would be managing a state liquor store. Busy working as a private duty nurse or manager of Store No. 272 in Canton, said that her personal goal is to see that the public is presented a pleasant greeting, a clean store, and quick and efficient service.

Pauline Kirschnick, manager of a $1.28-million-per-year store in North Olmsted, commented, "The only way to be a good manager is to thoroughly complete each day's work and transactions, and to be considerate of your employees, but firm."

"Your store reflects you," commented Annamie Salluom, manager of Mentor's $1 million self-serve wholesale-retail store. "Work with your managers, not against them," she advised women employees on their way up. "Take pride in your work and have a smile for everyone."

Isabelle Young, manager of Store No. 198 in Amherst, said that she has two mottos: "Never ask an employee to do a job I would not do myself," and "Treat every customer with kindness and respect."

"I am proud to be a woman manager," commented Shirley Yeazel, manager of Store No. 8 in London, touching on perhaps one of the most important aspects of any job.

Why were women absent from employment in the state stores before 1969? One reason was the job duty of lifting heavy cases of liquor. Another was the lack of separate restroom facilities, required by law where both men and women work. These obstacles have been overcome.

Audrey Creighton, assistant manager of Store No. 102 in Canton, remembers that such progress was not easy. She said that the men at her store "could not believe that I or any woman hired would have her own 'powder room'." This project held up my starting work for several weeks!

Women managers and assistant managers have demonstrated that they have the physical stamina to do the job. Barbara Donahoe, manager of Store No. 210 (a $1 + million retail store in Columbus) said that from the time she was hired as a clerk in 1971, she "did everything that the job description required."

"Even today," Barbara said, "I won't ask my employees to do anything that I won't do myself, including unloading a whiskey truck, mopping a floor or stocking shelves."

Patricia Kangas, assistant manager of a $1.6 million retail-wholesale outlet in Ashtabula, has four full-time women employees working for her. "They do an excellent job of all that is required of them, including unloading 400 to 600 cases a week," she said.

Who are these 51 female "pioneers" in store management?

They come from various backgrounds, from cities, farms and small towns, and from other states as well as Ohio. Many are married with children; some are grandmothers. A few are divorced and supporting families.

They have worked as clerks, waitresses, mixologists, telephone operators, receptionists, nurses aides, and business managers. Most of them hold high school diplomas and some have had additional courses at colleges and business schools.

They are active people. Cora Sandra Alexander, assistant manager of Store No. 264 in Cuyahoga Falls, is president of the Akromates, a boating organization. Patricia Kangas enjoys writing poetry. She also enjoys sports, as do many of the others.

ENERGY SEMINAR SET FOR SCHILLER PARK

Do we have an energy crisis—is insulation worth the money? These questions and others will be answered at a public seminar to be held Thursday, June 30 at Schiller Park Recreation Center, German Village.

The seminar, sponsored by the Citizens Committee on Energy, starts at 8 p.m. and will feature energy experts from around the state. John Kasich, chairman of the Committee says the idea of the seminar is to make people aware that last winter's problems could easily become this winter's problems.

He noted experts say we have a limited supply of gas and without conservation, this country faces disaster. "The energy lost, because we have inferior insulation in our homes, is incredible," said Kasich. He said reduced fuel bills because of insulation would make the investment desirable in almost every home.

teacher's aide while raising nine children, Margarette eventually separated from her husband and had to take care of her mother who was ill.

Today she is manager of State Liquor Store No. 4 in Columbus, a modern, self-serve facility with an annual sales volume of over $500,000.

Margarette Washington has her own special interest: helping her employees. She remembers her own situation well.

"I needed a chance to become self-supporting and make a better life for myself and my family," Margarette reflected.

Margarette got that chance after moving to Columbus in 1970. In just a few years, Margarette worked her way up from temporary employment during Christmas, 1971, to permanent Clerk I and II in 1972, and to Manager in 1973. In November, 1975 her store received the Store-of-the-Month award, the department's recognition of good store operations.

Margarette realizes that most people, like herself, just need a chance to make a better way of life and if at all possible, she's going to give it to them.

Margarette is one of 360 women working in Ohio's state liquor stores. More significantly, she is one of 51 women who are either manager or assistant managers.

"These statistics represent substantial progress in the hiring of women in our department," stated Director Clifford E. Reich of the Ohio Department of Liquor Control. "Until 1969, except for a few women doing paper-work in the warehouses, the state liquor stores were staffed exclusively by men. The trend toward more women in store management represents progress not only for women, but the entire department," the Director said. "Women generally make excellent managers. Many of them are experienced 'managers' before they become store managers. They are experienced in home management, and know how to maintain the family's finances and work with other people."

Catherine Wolph, manager of the Fostoria liquor store, agreed that women are fit for the job. "Being a woman manager only proves to me that a woman is equally qualified to do jobs that formerly were designed for men," she said.

Betty Seymour, manager of the Barberton store, saw a definite advantage to having female management: "I have had women customers tell me they feel more comfortable being waited on by women. Men customers tend to be more polite."

Managing a state liquor store requires many different tasks. Maintaining inventory, assisting customers, supervising employees, doing the bookkeeping and helping out where needed are all important job duties. In the process of accomplishing these tasks, women managers have individual methods and guidelines.

This is who we are and what we do at General Motors.

"Energy conservation makes good financial sense."

Earl Shiflett, Engineer, GM Assembly Division, Baltimore, Md.

"We've spent over $3.7 million in this plant on energy conservation programs. Economically, the costs are justifiable when you look at the financial payback. The amount of energy we use to build a vehicle here has been reduced significantly since we started our program in 1973.

"GM plants all have energy conservation committees.

Each plant submits ideas and they're dispersed throughout the corporation in an energy conservation manual. We've also published a booklet called '101 Ideas at Work.'

"We've initiated a lot of programs that have resulted in energy reductions. We installed heat exchangers in our paint oven exhaust stacks to utilize our waste heat. By bringing in the fresh air across a counterflow heat exchanger, we preheat the incoming air up to a temperature around 200°. That has reduced our natural gas consumption considerably.

"Anytime we have nonproduction weekends, we shut off our boilers entirely. Usually, you maintain your boilers for minimum building heat so that you don't freeze your water lines. That was a common practice. As long as the outside air temperature is greater than 35°, we turn off the boilers. Now, Monday mornings are cold, but that saves approximately 25,000 gallons of fuel oil a weekend.

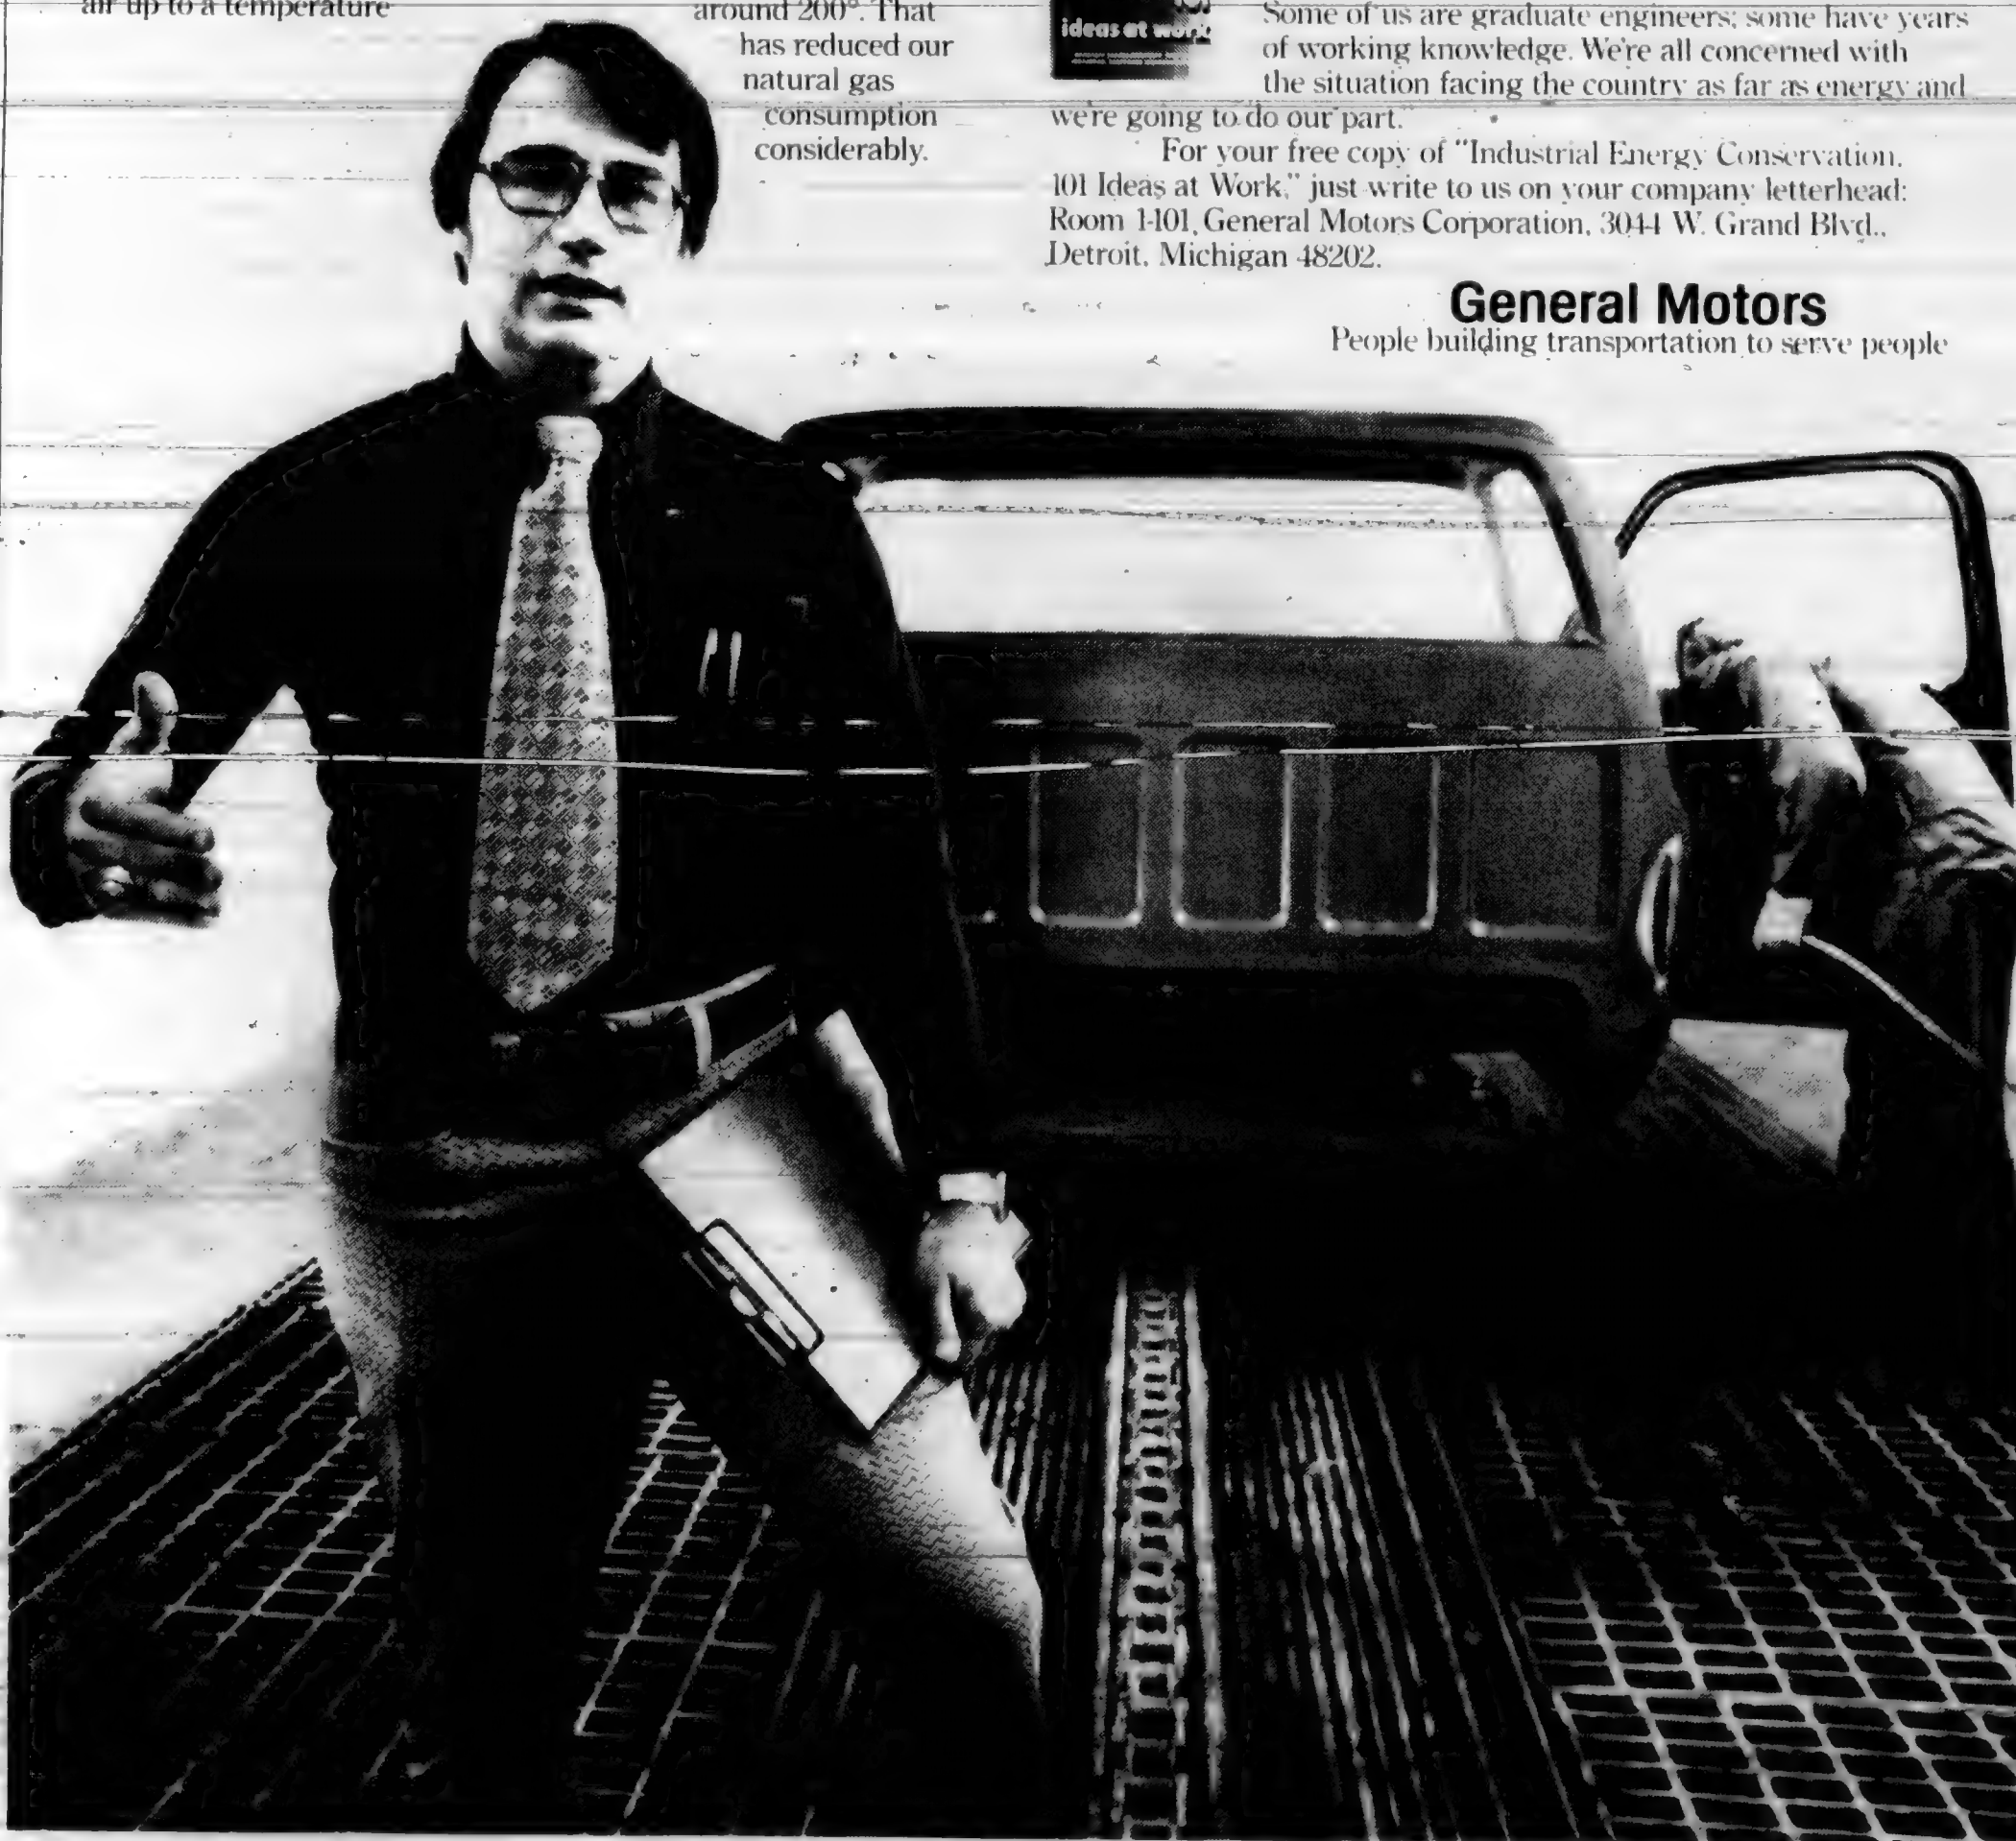

"We also have a computer system to turn production equipment on and off simultaneously so that some equipment won't be started up ahead and use up extra energy. The computer also gives us better control over our heating and ventilating equipment.

"We have a tight-knit group of people here, anxious to share their knowledge and experience. Some of us are graduate engineers; some have years of working knowledge. We're all concerned with the situation facing the country as far as energy and we're going to do our part.

Two of the eight elementary schools proposed as alternative schools under the Columbus board's desegregation plan are in the districts of white members of the board of education, and, just days after the plan was announced, were leading in the number of applications received, with a total of over 350 applications.

The schools, Olde Orchard and Glenmont, are in the districts of M. Steven Boley and Marilyn Redden respectively. Boley's oldest child recently completed kindergarten at Olde Orchard. Redden's son is now at Dominion Junior High, but Redden was active for many years in the Glenmont PTA.

According to Leo Ross, attorney for the original plaintiffs in the desegregation suit, Boley insisted that Olde Orchard be designated as an alternative school, an action that Ross described as "just privilege."

Although applications will be accepted on a first come, first served basis, there will be exceptions in order to achieve racial balance at each alternative school. Priority will also be given to 25 percent of the neighborhood population.

As of last Friday, there were a total of 1326 applications to the proposed alternatives. The applications to these schools are technically called "intent to register" forms.

According to Pupil Personnel Director Norval Goss, there is "room for plenty more" and a particular need for more black applicants. Goss said none of the alternative schools was full for black students. There will be spaces for approximately 32 percent black students at each alternative school.

He said the proposed alternative schools will only open if they have a racially balanced enrollment, if they are part of a Court-approved plan, if there is sufficient enrollment, if funds are available and if transportation needs can be met.

Both Glenmont and Olde Orchard are proposed as arts impact schools. Other proposed elementary alternatives include the Gettysburg Environmental Science School, James Road Career Motivation, Lexington Informal, Lindbergh Arts Impact, Marburn Arts Impact and Shepard Traditional.

Parents who wish to be considered for one of these alternatives should send an intent form to Pupil Personnel at 270 E. State St. by June 24.

Columbus Plan applications are also being accepted for full-day racial balance and program transfers. The five existing elementary alternatives, plus the Franklin Success Impact Junior High, are included in the full-day program transfers. In addition, half-day transfers are being processed for vocational programs at the Members of the National Honor Society at East High School were honored at a luncheon recently at the Worthington Inn.

Approximately 50 students of high academic success were honored at the event, a traditional end-of-the-year event at East.

Katina M. Jennings, a straight A student during her high school years, and Steve A. Smith, who has had all A's except for one B, were honored at the recent honor society assembly. Jennings, the senior class secretary, is the daughter of Eugene and Bettrose Jennings of 1847 Arborfield Pl. Smith, who is president of the senior class, is the son of Clarence and May Smith, 1786 Franklin Ave.

Also honored recently at East were approximately 60 students at an All-A's Banquet held at the Airport Holiday Inn for students who received straight A's for at least one six-week grading period. Parents and faculty members were present and the Rev. Cameron Jackson was the featured speaker.

Two students from Columbus were among those honored recently at the Storm King School, Cornwall-On-Hudson, N.Y., when 41 seniors and other outstanding students were recognized during the 110th graduation ceremonies at the school.

Homer Anderson, son of Gloria J. Anderson of South 8th St., shared the headmaster's cup for outstanding service to the school. Vice president of the student body, co-captain of last winter's varsity basketball team and a headwaiter, the senior also earned a Pentagonal cup for more than five varsity letters at the school. He heads to Ohio Wesleyan in September.

Maurice Gates, son of Callie Scales of 121 N. Yale Ave., won a special art award. A senior next fall, Maurice has also been named editor of the Storm King yearbook and a dormitory prefect.

Jennifer Gordon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Melvin Gordon has been honored with a scholarship to the Nationwide Beauty Academy.

A graduate of Mifflin High School, she will start her training in September.

Job opportunities for young musicians between the ages of 14 and 21 will be available this summer through the joint efforts of the City of Columbus Community Services Department and the Columbus Public Schools. A concert band will be formed for the purpose of performing at various functions in Franklin County this summer from June 27 through August 26, 1977.

The Summer Work Experience Band has been established through the use of federal funds to provide students from low-income families summer job opportunities and income as musical performers.

All Franklin County residents interested in obtaining additional information about the Summer Band Program should call the Columbus Education Center at 225-2600 between the hours of 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

Scoutmaster John Peck said that they located the lonely fawn whose tail had been injured in a small field. He was without his parents, so they parented him to his home, 180 N. 18th St. Next stop for the

Area College's Upward Bound Program To Be Phased Out; One Of Two In Ohio Cut By HEW

By WIL HAYGOOD

The federally funded Upward Bound program at Ohio Dominican College is one of two in Ohio—the other being Bowling Green—that will not be in operation this summer as a result of a decision made recently by the Chicago office of the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW).

Ohio Dominican Upward Bound Director Claude Willis, who will officially leave his post on June 22 along with Assistant Director Germaine Simpson, gave no conclusive reason as to why the program is being terminated, but did admit that neither of the two programs had been on HEW's priority list. There are 10 other Upward Bound programs that will be operating this summer at various colleges in Ohio.

Since the Ohio Dominican program began in 1968, about 270 people

A trip to Kings Island, trophies, ribbons and "Be Our Guest" McDonald hamburger coupons, will be the prizes for participants in the fourth annual Mike Peppe Splash-A-Thon for crippled children in July, co-sponsored by the Crippled Children's Center and McDonald's.

The event, scheduled at local swimming pools, will give summer swimmers, young and old, a chance to improve their water skills and at the same time help the handicapped learn to swim and receive hydrotherapy. The Splash-A-Thon swimmers will sign up sponsors, who will, in turn, pledge funds for laps to be swum in the event. All proceeds raised by Splash-A-Thon participants will be used for operating expenses for the Center's in door therapeutic-recreational swimming pool at 565 Children's Drive West.

An all-day trip to Kings Island, including a lunch at McDonald's will be awarded to the top money producer at each pool. Also at each pool, a trophy will be given to the swimmer who brings in the most money from pledged for laps officially completed. Second and third place ribbons will also be awarded at each pool. All Splash-A-Thon swimmers will be given at McDonald's "Be Our Guest" certificate good for a McDonald's hamburger, when their assignments are completed.

A four-foot trophy, donated by Recreation Unlimited, will go to the have been enrolled, says Willis, further stating that 85% who enrolled with the program stayed.

Set up on a national basis 10 years ago, Upward Bound's goal has been to seek out inner-city high school youth who show potential for college work but may not realize it because of economic or cultural deprivation. Individuals accepted into the program spend summers on campuses, such as Ohio Dominican, taking courses and becoming acclimated to college life in general. Tuition, room and board and a small allowance are all provided to the students enrolled in the program.

The program's thrust was to compensate for poor academic preparation and motivation, and thus to increase a young person's promise for acceptance and success in post-high educational programs.

About 48 Upward Bound

graduates have graduated from four-year colleges and universities, and are in such diverse fields as pharmacy, education, journalism and counseling," states Willis.

Willis, who has been affiliated with the program since its inception in 1968, (he began as an assistant director and was promoted to director four years ago) adds that "we (officials with the program) really think it has been a success; it assured many of the 85% who enrolled and stayed in the program an opportunity to consider furthering their educational experiences." Financial aid counseling for high school seniors on the way to college was an integral part of the program, according to the Director.

There are 46 students currently enrolled in the Ohio Dominican Upward Bound program and all are scheduled to transfer to the program at Ohio Wesleyan College. Willis fears that many of them may drop out.

"Some of the kids will just take summer jobs instead of switching to another site. We may very well lose over half of them."

Willis did mention that HEW officials have indicated that there is a possibility that the program could be returned to the Sunbury Rd. campus next year.

"I am going to miss the program and the kids," he said. "There are a lot of them who have benefited from our services. I am glad of that."

Court Says Seniority Inviolable

The U.S. Supreme Court, by a 7 to 2 ruling, has said that past job discrimination against blacks and other minorities, are not necessarily illegal.

The ruling puts the Court's stamp of approval on acts of racial discrimination that occurred before Title VII went into effect in July, 1965.

The court held that in passing the Civil Rights Act Congress had intended to allow the continued "routine application" of seniority systems, "even where the employer's pre-act discrimination resulted in whites having greater existing seniority rights than Negroes."

"Although a seniority system inevitably tends to perpetuate the effect of pre-act discrimination in such cases, the Congressional judgment was that Title VII should not outlaw the use of existing seniority lists and thereby destroy or water down the vested seniority rights of employees simply because their employer had engaged in discrimination prior to the act," the Court said in an opinion by Justice Potter Stewart.

Justices Thurgood Marshall, the High Court's only black member, and William J. Brennan Jr., were the two dissenters.

The decision is a big set back for black workers who were always the last hired and first fired, thereby never having the opportunity to build up seniority.

Due to this ruling, Negro workers who have suffered from this kind of racial discrimination, must now find another way to be compensated for the deliberate acts of racial discrimination that has cheated them out of seniority and earnings.

What A Difference Race Makes

One of the biggest scandals in American history was "Watergate." Its tentacles reached far, high and wide, eventually toppling the President of the United States.

This whole Watergate affair was triggered by a lowly Negro night watchman whose keen eye detected the unlocked door. For a brief moment, Frank Willis was in the news spotlight. Since then, he has drifted from one job to another, plus being jobless much of the time.

On the other hand, most of the White participants have, despite their guilt, made millions of dollars out of their participation.

However, the lone, Negro who triggered the whole incident, can barely keep ahead of the relief rolls.

This shows that Frank Willis was not as smart as the crooks he uncovered. They maneuvered to capitalize on their crime, while Willis could not make a dime out of his honesty. Maybe race does make a difference even where crooks are involved.

It's Dues-Paying Time...

It's dues-paying time, brothers and sisters.

Judge Robert M. Duncan, of the U.S. Court for the Southern District of Ohio, early this year ruled that the Board of Education of the City of Columbus was guilty of intentionally fostering racial segregation.

Certainly no black person who has spent more than a few minutes in Columbus could argue with that finding. Nor have we heard blacks arguing with that finding: for any black person, and most rational whites, it is an obvious and unquestionable fact that Columbus Public Schools are now and always have been racially segregated. It is also obvious and unquestionably true that the present board and previous boards of education have consciously conspired to create and maintain segregation within the system.

Back in the 'fifties and 'sixties, it would have been damn near impossible to find a black person in these 50 United States who disagreed with the principle of desegregation or who challenged the means employed to achieve that objective.

Now OUR chickens are coming home to roost. Right here in Columbus, Ohio.

Youth's Needs Must Be Planned For

One of the most important aspects of our nation's employment policies lies in the area of youth unemployment, on which a major assault is essential. The millions of young people who are unemployed cannot be adequately absorbed by the private sector, nor can they be reached by the standard remedies for adult unemployment and a flagging economy. Increased employment among adults does not benefit young people, and tax cuts do not filter down to them. If we are to reduce the national tragedy of massive, chronic youth unemployment the special needs of youth must be confronted directly.

A step in the right direction has been the fact that President Carter has asked for $1.5 billion for new youth employment programs as part of his economic recovery package. A part of the President's proposal is the creation of a National Youth Conservation Corps, to be administered by the Labor Department through agreements with the Agriculture and Interior Departments on state park and forestry lands. Through this corps, youth conservation centers would employ young Americans aged 16 to 24 in conservation programs in the maintenance and improvement of public parks, forests, and recreation areas. The President has further proposed state and city Youth Community Conservation and Improvement Projects for improving neighborhoods and communities and maintaining and restoring national resources on publicly owned land. The President's proposals include the provision of the full range of employment services to be provided through community based organizations, through comprehensive youth employment and training programs. In addition, the President has asked for funds to double the size of the Job Corps for one year and the extension of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

While all these programs would be welcome, yet the question remains, how will they measure up in relation to the nation's overall youth picture in the years to come?

The problem of chronic youth employment cannot be handled on a stop-gap basis. The most important thing to do in this respect would be to carefully develop long term strategy which can yield effective results. To this end, a Presidential youth commission with full backing of the President and considerable authority should be created within the next six months for comprehensive planning, coordination and youth advocacy. The Presidential youth commission, housed in the White House, would be the focal point for youth advocacy within the federal structure, and provide coordination among operating

DOWN THE BIG ROAD

How Good Are Our Schools?

I am sure that, if you asked a hundred people, "how good an education our children are getting in our public schools, you would come up with many different answers. Most of them would be a poor education.

The public schools, during the past year, have come in for some bitter castigations regarding the deficiencies of the students graduating from our schools. These incidents have focused on the students who didn't learn, while little or no mention is made about those students who have earned good marks.

During the past three months I have had occasion to visit several Cleveland public schools. I have talked to students; have seen them conduct programs; read and speak. The schools I have visited, have been in various neighborhoods of the city.

This experience has given me an insight into classroom activities, teacher and student behavior.

I also participate in the luncheon program every year. This is a program that solicits a local business executive to host a luncheon for four students and a teacher at Stouffers Top-of-The-Town restaurant.

From my personal contact and experience with these students, I just can't be as pessimistic about the kind of quality education our schools offer as some other people.

Frankly, I have been most favorably impressed by what I have seen and heard.

Their interrogation of me, was very professional. Their questions were to the point and germane to the subject. If I had to select the students who impressed me the most, I would have to say the sixth graders. I found them vibrant, eager and well informed.

And, the letters of appreciation I have received from these sixth graders have been heart warming. As the speaker at the promotion exercises at Chesterfield Elementary school, my introduction by sixth grader Karen McPherson, was as fine an introduction as I have ever had. She read it flawlessly and, with aplomb.

The letter I received from a sixth grade student at Gracemount Elementary school, was not only well written, but artistic as well. Similarly, the letters I have received from the sixth graders I have hosted for lunch, have been equally impressive.

From what I have seen and heard from the many schools I have been privileged to visit to participate in programs, or observe demonstrations, I must say that some schools and some teachers are doing a good job, and many of the children are responding.

I am convinced that if the parents and the neighborhoods would take as much interest in our children as our schools and teachers do, we would have far fewer problems both in and out of our schools.

Children take their cues from their parents and the neighborhoods in which they live. One of the complaints I have received from teachers and school officials, is that PTA's are not as well organized or supported as they should be.

With the first phases of school desegregation coming in September, PTA's will have to bear the brunt of the responsibility of its implementation. The children must be spared as much of the trauma of the change as possible. The education, welfare and safety of these children must be our first and major concern.

From what I have seen of our black children in school, I am sure they are far more ready for the integration than are our PTA's.

It will be tragic if the progress now being made toward quality education in our schools is given a setback because of racism on the part of adults.

The interracial groups of students I have hosted for lunch, could not have been more compatible. Some of the warmest letters I have received have been from white students.

I am convinced that our schools can do a good job in providing quality education under whatever the circumstances are, if they can get the full support of the parents and the community.

If more adults could or would visit these schools as I have, I am sure that any doubts they may have would be cleared up. Not only have the students impressed me, but the sincerity and dedication of the teachers could not be overlooked and, this goes for both White and Black teachers.

Our schools will be as good as we let the teachers and students make them.

Corn Pone Diplomacy

To be able to say one thing and mean another is apparently the criteria for sophisticated diplomacy, and this standard is the major reason why the nation's splenetic ambassador to the United Nations is having so much difficulty getting his thoughts and/or sentiments over to the gentlemen (and ladies) of the press.

Or perhaps his open candor is the principal reason why he is receiving more printers ink than the staid and conventional double-talking gentlemen who performed more in the mold made famous by the departed (but not extinct) Henry Kissinger.

After repeated faux pas in diplomatic language, here and abroad, Andy Young he suddenly discovered that the wily boys of the press have been consistently setting him up with leading—and often provoking—questions, and at long last he is learning to anticipate some of their tricks. Nevertheless, we are likely to see some toning down of Mr. Young's remarks anent foreign policy in the immediate future, or find him deeply enmeshed in his own quotations taken out of context that he will have no other recourse than to gracefully retire from the lists.

We earnestly hope that he does not get himself in to the futile business of trying to solve the South African problem, since all indications are that it will never offer itself to any peaceful solution that will end in majority rule in that hard-core, hard-nosed tip of the African continent.

For no matter what Andrew Young says publicly, nor how much inspiration he attempts to give the revolutionary forces in Black Africa, the U.S. is (despite President Carter's noble words on human rights) not to repeat NOT ready to use force to guarantee majority rights to South Africans.

There are many reasons for this prediction. Past hesitations by the U.S. State department to take any kind of sanctions against the home of apartheid, including the reluctant move to boycott the importation of chrome from South African mines.

The second, is the repeated affirmations by South African leaders that the only move they have considered in diluting their apartheid "separateness" policies is to give the ten divergent tribes within their scope, a sort of permissive independence, and let them elect puppet officials to run their local "tribal" affairs. In the meantime they intend to keep the Major portions of South Africa, its mineral wealth and commerce, comprising some 80 percent of all the land, strictly as a white bastion of power.

Latest to be heard in this matter is their New Foreign Minister Piki Botha, who has described U.S. demands for one-man, one-vote in South Africa as "impossible."

As Americans say, "there is no way, baby" in which we are going to accept this. Botha said recently at a Cape Town Press club banquet, "Forget it, we are not going to do this after 300 years."

He had said virtually the same thing, but more forcefully to the national meeting of black newspaper publishers some months ago.

Botha said that majority rule demands like those made by Vice President Walter Mondale during his talks with South African Prime Minister John Vorster in Vienna last month "pulled the rug from under the feet of those who want change."

"How can we move if we can only move to our own destruction? We fear black domination. That is a fact, and that is the basis of our policy. An unqualified one."

"I believe the average American will side with us on our right to survival. He won't side with us militarily, but he will support our right to survive."

During his Vienna meeting with Vorster, Mondale warned South Africa that continuing racial discrimination and denial of political rights to blacks will lead to worsening relations with the United States and increased violence in southern Africa.

Botha also told the banquet that during his term as ambassador in Washington and to the United Nations, he was approached by people from 14 black nations seeking South African assistance in the overthrow of their governments.

"Fourteen times I said no, sometimes without even referring their request to my government," he said.

Senators Dutch Raised

Every so often our State Legislators are confronted with a bill which tends to test their innermost feelings towards ethnic groups. And during a debate if one listens closely, he's apt to hear an opponent of any such legislation preface his remarks with feeble excuses and irrelevant comments.

Such was the case last Thursday during the debate on a bill designed to establish a Commission and Office of Spanish Speaking Affairs and an Interagency on Spanish Speaking Affairs. The measure, Am. H.B. 11, had already been approved by the House where it originated. It carried the names of at least six black representatives as co-sponsors.

During the Senate debate, Senator Donald "Buzz" Lukens, conservative Middletown Republican who's been frequently mentioned as a possible gubernatorial candidate in 1978, was recognized to address the body. Of course, he had no intention of speaking on the bill, until he heard the sponsor and supporter cite reasons why it should be passed.

In the first place, Lukens said, he could not see the urgency for creating such a commission since there's only 100,000 Spanish-speaking Americans in the State of Ohio. And secondly, he argued that to pass the bill with its $100,000 appropriation provision, would just create another form of bureaucracy and that two years later they will be asking for $200,000 or $300,000.

Finally Lukens said let the Spanish-speaking Americans do as other minority groups did in making their way in society. As an example, he asserted: "I'm Dutch minority and nobody ever did anything for me." He said he sympathized with the Spanish speaking folk plight but "I cannot support this bill and I hope the Governor will veto it as he did two years ago," Lukens said.

After he sat down and Senate voted to pass the bill 22 to 10 and returned it to the House for concurrence in Senate amendments. It will then be sent to Gov. James A. Rhodes for approval or disapproval.

In the meantime, the Senate is expected to attempt to override Gov. Rhodes veto of a bill which was dear to the heart of the three black Hamilton County legislators this week. The measure, S.B. 17, would divide the Hamilton County Municipal Court into three districts for the election of judges.

The bill provides for the election of five judges city-wide and five countywide and three within the bounds of the city of Cincinnati.

Sen. William Bowen, chief sponsor, obviously highly incensed because of Rhodes' veto, vows to use all of his political clout to sway his Democrat colleagues to override the veto this week.

Family Rights Need Support

By the razor-thin margin of only one vote, the Supreme Court rendered a decision of major importance in enabling the extended family to survive. At the same time, federal planners are sending up trial balloons for a plan that would weaken family life.

In the court case, an East Cleveland, Ohio zoning law was struck down because, by making it a crime for a grandmother and her grandchild to live in the same house, it violated their constitutional rights.

The zoning law said that dwelling units in the town could only be occupied by members of a single family, and then defined "family" so narrowly that it would have excluded from her home a grandchild who came to live with Mrs. Inez Moore when her daughter died.

Instead of applauding this example of family love, the town prosecuted the case and won criminal penalties against Mrs. Moore as Ohio courts backed the case against her, deciding that East Cleveland had the right to determine the types of family arrangements allowed and also, of course, to define what a "family" is.

That definition was the standard middle-class one, not only ignoring the rights of the people to live with their kin, but also excluding common family patterns among minorities.

Although justice was finally done, the very narrowness of the Court's vote and the stony disregard for human rights evidenced in some of the justice's opinions make it hard not to be disturbed.

Justice Bryon R. White, for example, claimed Mrs. Moore wasn't denied due process since "she and her grandchildren could have moved elsewhere in the Cleveland metropolitan area."

For the majority, Justice Lewis F. Powell, Jr., correctly pointed out that along with the nuclear family (husband, wife and their children) "the tradition of uncles, aunts, cousins, and especially grandparents, sharing a household along with parents and children has roots equally deserving of constitutional recognition."

It is ironic that such a case should come up at the very moment when discontent with the nuclear family is becoming widespread. Experts have indicated that the nuclear family tends to isolate individuals, deprives the elderly of meaningful functions within the family, and deprives children of the support of the warm ties of the traditional extended family.

Yet another irony is that black people, who have repeatedly been condemned for supposedly "weak family structure" have been the group most strongly attached to the survival of the traditional extended family. One of the basic instruments of black survival has been the strength of the ties binding the generations and kinship.

As the weaknesses of the nuclear family have become more apparent it has also become clearer that the attacks on the black family have obscured much that other American families could learn from. Attempts to force conformity to a single, monolithic concept of what constitutes a family reflects intolerance and stope us from achieving a truly pluralistic society.

Meanwhile, federal officials designing the promised welfare reform programs have come up with some ideas that would further shatter the attempts of poor families to stay together, this time through a very broad definition of family.

In their unrealistic effort to design a reform package that doesn't cost any more than present social programs, they've suggested regulations that would include as "family" any blood relatives in the same household in deciding eligibility for aid. This would effectively cut many teenage mothers and their children from the rolls, along with many aged, blind or disabled persons, and it would encourage family breakup.

Someone ought to tell federal officials, town fathers and judges that social policy should support family strengths, not tear them down.

For the morals of the people, As they watch the ladies pee, But somebody has suspected That that little Forbean smirk Is perhaps an indication That he's now upstaging Perk. Who has banned the nasty Playboy, An' has done the Hustler in, Now I wonder just how many He will save from lust an' sin.

What Price Integration..?

The State Elks held their annual meeting in Columbus last week, beginning June 14. The headquarters for the delegates was the Elks House where so many black conventions go now. Suffice it to say, that an annual meeting brings money to merchants in the city, but alas, the white man got it all. On yes, the black merchants picked up a few dollars at night clubs and then, in general, that was all.

The black businessman does not get in on boom time money anymore. Thirty years or so ago, he did. Delegates had to live some place during annual convales, so lodge committees found dwellings in the city. They ate in black restaurants of the Eastside so the black merchant reaped the benefit of a conclave of delegates.

Not anymore does this happen. The conclave takes itself and headquarters to the white folks accommodations. Those accommodations are the center of the white folks business district and he reaps the take of souvenirs and post cards that go back home saying: "Wish you were here."

The accommodating hotel gets the lion's share of the delegates money in renting rooms for mass meetings, individual rooms for delegates, feeding them and any other requirements. It all amounts up to a lot of money that could accrue to the conspicuously absent black wealth. But the black man is no longer ready for such shindig.

They used to make the Miami Long Masonic Temple do for the mass meetings along with church auditoriums and that large dance hall that used to sit in Mt. Vernon and Champagne Aves. Nothing, the black man has adequate money longer. Neither was that mule cart that bore Martin Luther King's remains to the graveyard, up those southern black folks followed an ideal in the cart, they made it to.

The NAACP held a national convention in Columbus about 1939, all in the black man's environment and they got it done very well. All the convention's money went into the black man's pocket from the conventions that holes up in the white districts.

One cannot argue with what the delegates and the ruling body do, for the black people have no accommodations for the convention anymore unless the fraternal body decides to emulate the King funeral procession...make the old methods do. That business should come to the black business folks though.

The white man now builds a huge convention center on North High St. He is ever looking forward to bringing more business to Columbus. Once the Broad and Sixth Sts. Memorial Hall took care of needs along with hotel rooms. They had to have a better place, so the Memorial Hall across the river on Broad St., was built after WW II, but it failed the needs. So the new convention center to rest on the old Union Station grounds arises and, by the time it is finished, it will be lacking. But the efforts pay off for the local merchants. A convention carries big money to be spent in the meeting area.

The black man just has nothing to offer a state or national conclave unless the conventioners are real black folks and willing to make some of those methods do something like they carried Rev. King's body to the grave, not in a line hearse, but on a wagon drawn by a mule.

Now who wants to live in a private home during a convention and attend conclave meetings in a small hall, eat at this or that restaurant, when the whole action can be put together under one roof? No one, but the performers would realize that they would be putting the money, for the conclave, back into the pockets of the black people. Black people did it once when the white man had discrimination policies to keep them out. Have they a racial loyalty and pride to do it again and put the money back into the hands of black people?

No, not at all. Black people are strong on mass meeting talk in pledging loyalty to the race cause but inch short on actual action. They don't riot any more but are vociferous in disclaiming acts of the white man but the hypocrisy of the black man is exposed too often in what he does. He holds big conventions giving the lion's share of the take to the white man. If his father and grandfather could hold his conventions among his own folks, why can't he shave off the finery of white accommodations and repeat the same?

It is mete that the black man should use every right gained against prejudice and the use of white accommodations goes in the right direction but, now let me see - to the loss of black business income?

such a commission should be given Cabinet-level status, and its commissioner included in cabinet meetings. Its mandate should require the development of comprehensive, long-range plans for federal action, to be presented to the President within one year.

The commission in its planning should, through conferences and workshops, seek input from and accountability with a broad spectrum of groups in our society, including business, labor, education, voluntary organizations and youth. Voluntary agencies, in particular, have had significant success in youth program operations, and should be given a major role in both planning and conducting future efforts.

Without such long range planning and coordination all our efforts towards youth employment may be rendered ineffective.

OUR READERS' OPINION

Thanks C-P For Help

Dear Editor:

All of us here at Volunteer Services of the Columbus Public Schools would like to thank you for the excellent way in which your newspaper has helped to lend direction to our volunteer recruitment efforts this year.

We have many events which take place during the school year, such as the recruitment drives which take place during the fall, winter and spring. We also conduct an annual recognition program in the spring which is our way of saying "thank-you" to all volunteers who have served during the previous school year.

Newspapers such as yours are essential in getting our message to the people of the city. We feel that a valuable community service is being fulfilled by the publishing of articles about Volunteer Services in that the public is made more aware of our services. In addition, such articles are persuasive in the recruitment of new volunteers.

Again, we wish to thank you for your assistance and hope that you will continue to help Volunteer Services help others.

Sincerely,

Blacks Big Users Of Telephones

Dear Editor:

I recently read an article in the Jet magazine, which stated that the higher percentage of telephone users in Hartford, Conn., were the blacks.

This article was very interesting. I was just thinking about the same thing two or three weeks ago, and I think the same situation exists in Cleveland also. My main reason for thinking this way is because I had an opportunity to look at the executive list in Cleveland, and there were no blacks listed on Bell telephone executive list. I also had an opportunity to check out the hiring practice at the Ohio Bell employment office at St. Clair, and it is not acceptable to the black people of this community.

There are people in the telephone employment office who know absolutely nothing about telephone work. We have a lot of students graduating year after year in Cleveland, who should be given the chance to be trained in the telephone field. The only way we can find out if they have the aptitude for this training, is to try them out for the job.

It will be only fair to the community and the youths of tomorrow, since they are the higher % of users in the telephone industry. I hope you will print this in your newspaper, for the benefit of the community and the young black students.

Yours respectfully,
C.E. Harper

"SPEAK TRUTH TO POWER"

Dear Editor,

It is revealing, amazing and tragic what causes some people of power to become upset.

The Press came out alleging that Goldwater was linked to the Mafia. Nobody suggested he resign.

The J. P. Stevens Textile Industry continues to violate the rights and dignity of over 40,000 workers. 20% Black, 35% female. Nobody is upset.

Millions of people are unemployed. Many Republicans and Democrats are shamefully indifferent.

Organized crime is a multi-billion dollar enterprise and a multi-national corporate monster. The nation is indifferent.

The Supreme Court issues an edict denying constitutional and human rights and protection from cruel and inhumane treatment to school children. The nation is silent.

"Integration Carried To the Extremes"

Dear Editor:

Now we have the ridiculous court order of integrating the custodial staff of the Cleveland School System whom were not segregated intentionally. In the first place custodians and assistant custodians are people licensed by the state of Ohio as (Stationary Firemen or Stationary Engineers).

They are also certified by Cleveland Civil Service. These men have seniority rights on any building they qualify for based on seniority. The Black-White ratio among the custodians is not based on Board segregation but on other pertinent factors such as: (1) Building preference (2) Working conditions at a particular building (3) Overtime and transportation considerations. The recent court order to desegregate the custodial staff and cafeteria personnel is unreasonable and entirely irrelevant to desegregation for educational purposes.

Otis Moss, Jr.,
pastor Olivet Baptist Church

The Supreme Court rules in favor of seniority privileges and against civil rights. Both political parties are "quiet". The Supreme Court upholds killing by capital punishment. The nation is happy. When Andrew Young tells the truth about the racism of Britain and Russia, when he tells the truth about the racism of Nixon and Ford; the nation gets upset not about racism but about Andrew Young telling the truth about racism.

Brock wants Young fired for calling Nixon a racist; at that very moment Nixon's former Attorney General Mitchell and top aide Haldeman were on their way to jail as white collar criminals.

The Republicans are upset with Young. The Press reacts strongly to Andrew Young's statement, including the liberal New York Times, the conservative William Buckley and the renowned James Reston. The mass media must come to grips with its own institutionalized racism.

Andrew Young is the only black person in America with a world platform. What he says will be discussed in down home barber shops and 10 Downing Street, over cups of tea in Calcutta and over sips of champagne in France.

America is uneasy with Ambassador Young for speaking the truth and Buckley, Brock, Goldwater, Reston and company are uneasy with Carter for giving presidential support to one of the few moral voices of the National and World scenes today.

The forces of goodwill in our nation should not remain conspicuously silent in the face of the terrible forces seeking to bring down Andrew Young.

Former President Ford ought to remember that Andrew Young was the lone black in the House of Representatives to cast a 'yes' vote for him to become Vice-President.

In the final analysis the significant thing about Andrew Young's statement is: the man is right! He speaks truth to power.

Making Public School Desegregation Work

Dayton

The U.S. Supreme Court is reviewing the desegregation plan implemented in Fall, 1975, on appeal by the Board of Education of Dayton. The Board argues that the plan affecting the entire school system is too extensive given the constitutional wrongs committed by school officials. Oral arguments were heard by the Supreme Court in late April. A decision is anticipated in May or June.

Cleveland

The Cleveland Board of Education submitted a third plan to Judge Frank Battisti on Thursday, May 12. The Plaintiffs responded to the plan on May 20. Early June seems a likely time for a final order on the parts of the plan to be implemented this Fall.

This third attempt by the local board to develop a plan that meets court guidelines is different in three major aspects from the previous plans. First, it begins some mandatory reassignment of students this Fall. Second, it outlines a pattern of reassignment that allows all students and parents to know which schools their children will attend throughout their school years. Third, the document contains little of the earlier rhetoric about why desegregation will not work.

The Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals has scheduled hearings on the liability finding of the District Court for June 9. This means that a review of the District Court's findings by the Appeals Court may be completed this summer.

Columbus

School officials in Columbus and consultants for the State Department of Education are in the process of developing plans for submission to the District Court by June 6. Local officials have announced that the plan to be submitted to the Columbus Board of Education will include an expansion of alternative schools as well as mandatory reassignment of some students.

Youngstown

The trial on liability has been completed. Judge Leroy Gerte is now preparing his decision on whether the schools are unconstitutionally segregated. It is anticipated this summer.

Cincinnati

No trial date has been set yet for the expanded suit including Cincinnati suburbs. Various procedural motions are before District Judge Porter and hearings were scheduled for May 17.

Springfield

In September, 1975, Springfield was found not to be in compliance with the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The Office for Civil Rights of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has the authority under the Act to investigate complaints alleging discriminatory practices in school districts. If discriminatory practices are found, federal funds may be terminated.

After more than 18 months of negotiation, Springfield developed an acceptable plan to desegregate students and employees. Some parts of teacher reassignment were implemented in Fall, 1976. The bulk of the plan will be implemented in Fall, 1977.

Princeton

In September, 1975, Princeton was found not to be in compliance with the Civil Rights Act of 1964. In particular, teachers were hired and assigned in discriminatory fashion. Hearings were held in April 1977 before an administrative law judge to determine whether federal funds should be terminated to Princeton. No findings have been issued as of the date of publication.

Lima

In September, 1975, Lima was found not to be in compliance with the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Both teachers and students were claimed to have been assigned in discriminatory fashion. A plan for reassigning teachers was approved and implemented beginning in Fall, 1976. No satisfactory plan has been developed to reassign students. Hearings will be held this summer to determine whether federal funds should be cut off for failure to comply with federal law.

Toledo

In September, 1976, Toledo was found to be in violation of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 for hiring and reassigning teachers and administrators in a discriminatory fashion. The district has prepared an acceptable plan for desegregation of faculty and staff which will be implemented beginning in the Fall of 1977.

Shaker Heights

Shaker, with a 30% minority enrollment, has had a voluntary reassignment program between two largely black elementary schools and other schools in the district. White students from the other schools could transfer to Ludlow and Moreland schools and black students could transfer to other schools in the district. The voluntary transfer program has been altered and expanded to the high schools by board of education action.

Cleveland Heights-University Heights

School officials appointed a citizens committee which has been working most of the Spring to review additional desegregation efforts primarily for the elementary schools. The committee has issued a report with its preferred options and the board of education will reach decisions soon on steps for the 1977-78 school year.

Akron

The Akron Board of Education approved the Akron Plan which combines school construction and school closings with reassignment of pupils to enhance desegregation. The initial schools to be closed are largely black. The Akron Board has also been actively encouraging the State Board of Education and the Ohio General Assembly to promote metropolitan desegregation remedies.

Agrees With Editor On Quality Education

Dear Editor:

I was extremely pleased with Mr. Walker's article on Desegregation (Down The Big Road) June 4th edition. With all the controversy over the issue, his article was very timely and enlightening.

It takes courage to criticize any liberal cause, but, I don't think anyone, militant or liberal, could argue with his point that, quality education is the crux of the whole matter. I wish the article could get more exposure than just in our weekly paper.

Thinking Out Loud

Special Markets
Greyhound Corporation

I have a son and like so many mothers have a tendency to pamper him. But, the older he becomes, the more cautious I must become as it is not good to treat an adolescent son as if he were a baby. We do not help our sons by doing everything for them.

Today, too many young men walk around with their ear pierced, wearing hip clothes, etc., with little else on their minds but having a good time. You can visit homes of your friends and see grown up males who should be working, going to school, or doing something productive, just lying around while mama waits on them. So why should they go out and find a job, or go to school, when they have it made at home? And their next move from mama's is usually into the arms of another woman who will probably spend the rest of her life calling him "my baby."

Yet in daily conversations we hear black women lamenting that there are no men out here. Are we mothers part of the reason why the men that we do have cannot be "Men" in the truest sense of the word?

I feel sorry for those young black men who are having a difficult time coping with the pressures of today's society. Mothers we must let go of "our babies" and help our sons to understand the responsibilities that they must live up to. They must be taught that the home is not an escape hatch everytime the going gets rough. And they must stop looking for the mother image in their wives.

Mothers, we need to adjust our attitudes and methods when raising our sons. Our whole approach should be one of instilling strength and pride. Sure it's difficult to let your children go, but, when we talk about pushing for excellence, we have to begin with the rearing and teaching of our children at home.

BOB GOODING
...WCOL vice-president for one reason: performance. Being black he says (he is first black V-P at 'COL) has had no bearing on his ascendancy.

"Like everyone else around here, I got the promotion because of my performance," Gooding said in a CALL-POST interview from his Executive V-P suite at 'COL' headquarters, 195 E. Broad St. He was appointed to the post on June 13 by 'COL's President, Dan Morris.

In 1971, just a year on the scene at 'COL, Gooding created a highly successful FM news format for the station, which is under the Great Trails Broadcasting Network. Two years later, the relatively newcomer was appointed FM program director where he was largely responsible for the on-air format of 'COL FM, as well as acclimating new personnel to the radio's format. Again, the Gooding formula proved very successful. In the most recent national radio ranking for rock, 'COL, placed third.

By trade, Gooding seems to be a creative engineer. Goaded by high school instructors to channel his creative desires further, he applied for a scholarship to Philadelphia's School of Communicative Arts. He dabbled in radio and theater there. After his tenure, it was on to the stage-for the moment.

"I worked on stage as an actor in and around Philadelphia for awhile. It was a great experience," he states. He worked with Ed Bernard, now seen regularly on TV's Police-woman series. Gooding enjoyed working on stage, but it left something lacking.

"It was the sixties and I had this commitment to help people, especially the underprivileged," Gooding said.

In 1967, Gooding came to Columbus. He wasted no time in getting into the art of helping people. Along with Dr. Charles Taylor (now President of Central State University), he became instrumental in the operations of the Southside Settlement House. From there, Gooding joined the Vista program: a volunteer unit of talented individuals working together to help alleviate the pains of poverty throughout the country.

But like any fine artist, Gooding found it very difficult to divorce himself totally from the creative scene. An audition at 'COL in 1970 led to his being hired as a part-time radio announcer. From that humble start, he has pushed his way into Executive row.

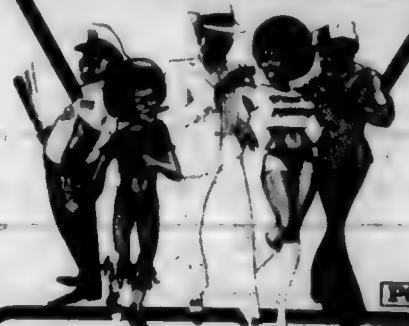

"I must give Dan Morris credit for having the courage and heart to appoint me to this position," Gooding remarked. In his new capacity, he is directly responsible for over-seeing and supervising the entire AM and FM format at the station.

"This Far By Faith"

A film of American culture's African roots.

Travel from Africa, where griots enthralled entire villages with the history of their ancestors, to America, where the minister of the Black church became the keeper of the flame of Black culture.

From the griot of ancient Africa, to the artists and entertainers of today, see how the roots of Black culture flourished, to weave their way into American culture.

ALL & P MEDIA IN MOTION By CARL EDWARD GILL

Sometimes in the past when in the process of organizing my personal reactions to anything remotely or otherwise related to Her Royal Mamaship, Aretha, I may have been too casual about what I have written about this very fabulous lady. But the truth remains there for all unbelievers to hear and therefore be convinced that there is absolutely no danger of "the other woman" of ever giving Ms. Franklin any serious competition.

Arguing against Aretha in comparison with that woman - and there are a whole group of fairly immature people who like to get off doing that kind of nonsense - is like not admitting that Marvin Gaye, Chaka Kahn/Rufus, Bobby Womack, Al Green, or Johnny Guitler Watson are individually bombed. Aretha is the essence of bombness, that is, if you can get into my directed drift.

Ms. Franklin's very first album, Aretha (Columbia, CS-3412), found her at 18 demonstrating several ways of doing the blues and jazz. "Today, I Sing the Blues" is probably the best remembered selection from Aretha, probably because it was included on Soul 69 (Atlantic, SD-8212) and set against the power and play of a big blues-styled jazz band, but the premiere single was even more stunning. "Maybe I'm a Fool" caused the older people to jump dead into her case for forsaking the gospel for the blues.

As history will support, the lady really didn't desert the gospel; the gospel, with its references to suffering and torment, is a basis for the blues. She put a little blues and all her soul in the innovative Amazing Grace in 1972, disproving those who had cast their stone against her for forsaking and convincing everyone else that anything she does will be belittling her unmatched, very fabulous talent.

Before I get into Sweet Passion, I would like to take this opportunity to make a few public statements about the 1967 debut album for Atlantic Records, I Never Loved a Man the Way I Love You. I need to say these things in order to clear up my own head and to arbitrate a rambling argument, previously referred to as having to do with the comparisons between Aretha and "that other woman." Personally, I maintain there is no comparison; there might be some with Esther, Gladys, and Millie Jackson, but those are for different reasons. Back to the point, however.

I remember the release of I Never Loved... as if it were yesterday. The title track, and its back-up, "Do Right Woman, Do Right Man," turned gold in a matter of days. During this period, us college bugs were dead into the "Motown Sound," The Man From U.N.C.L.E., and the Otis Redding phenomena, and therefore Aretha's bluesy, rather assertive program of songs drove us into a frenzy. While everybody could hang with the title pieces, it was Otis Redding's "R-E-S-P-E-C-T" re-established position as the "first" among vocalists and the primary exponent of still undefinable "soul." Then came "Dr. Feel-good" and "Don't Let Me Lose This Dream," both of which appeared on the terribly exciting Live in Paris (Atlantic, SD-8207).

Immediately prior to the release of I Never Loved A Man, on which Aretha was the principal keyboardist, an album that was recorded in the space of five working days, any college homecoming committee could have gotten the Lady for $500, complete with bass, drums, and guitar; after "R-E-S-P-E-C-T" started to dominate all the charts, the fee immediately jumped to $3,000. Needless to say, but she's a walking musical goldmine.

After getting into Sweet Passion's "When I Think About You," I am reminded of Nikki Giovanni's glorification of Her Royal Mamaship, a name supplied by Flip Wilson, in her 1971 "Poem for Aretha." Ms. Giovanni recently declared then, and I personally maintain now, that Aretha is undoubtedly the one person who everyone on notice: she revied Johnny Ace and remembered Tif Green/Aretha sings "I Say a Little Prayer" and Dionne doesn't want to hear it anymore/Aretha sings "Money Won't Change You" but James Brown can't sing "R-E-S-P-E-C-T" /The advent of Aretha pulled Ray Charles from "Marlboro Country" and back into the blues/Made Nancy Wilson try one more time/Forced Dionne to make a choice - she opted for the movies/And Diana Ross had to get an afro wig.

What it gets down to is Aretha's talent is so definitive that lyrics and music become incidental to success or failure, as it all depends on how she feel and if she chooses to get in there and carry whatever to its ultimate conclusion, such as "What I Did for Love" from Sweet Passion which is a simple, straight-forward presentation of a lovely Marvin Hamlisch song.

Obviously, Aretha had spring and summer things on her mind when she got into Sweet Passion, for three-fourths of the album is dominated by those light and breezy tunes that permit the lady to pulsate, beat, rock, boogie, and otherwise do things that automatically conjures up actions of riding down by the creek or stepping out to your favorite disco in Atlanta or Mobile.

Lamont Dozier has done a commendable job in putting the album together; he's provided Aretha with everything she needs to sing and play and thrill her listeners.

Aretha Franklin, Atlantic Records recording artist, is the featured performer at the Riverfront Stadium Cool Jazz Festival. Her latest album, Sweet Passion, is previewed by Carl Edward Gill in the "Media in Motion" feature elsewhere on this page.

There is a mix of styles and influences, ranging from Dozier's experiences with the Motown Organization, thus giving rise to the notion that "Touch Me Up" and "Sunshine Will Never Be the Same" could have easily been developed for the Supremes, to those selections written by Aretha to reflect her affections for the blues and her knowledge of the jazz form, scatting.

The support musicians understand Aretha's musical requirements; many of them have played for her before: Ray Brown, Ray Parker, Jr., Harold Mason, Lee Ritenour, Sonny Burke and Ronnie Coleman, et al. The Bar-num arrangements dominate Sweet Passion there are five songs written by Ms. Franklin, three of which are the album's best, and five others by either Marvin Hamlisch or Lamont Dozier.

Wizard Of Oz Featured In Summer Series

The Columbus Association for the Performing Arts announces an exciting Children's Summer Theatre Series at the Ohio Theatre to be performed by some of the most unique professional companies in the United States.

With the support of the Ohio Arts Council and Arthur Treacher's Fish and Chips, CAPA's Executive Director, Don Streibig has scheduled four events that are sure to entertain both children and adults alike.

The Prince Street Players will present a sparkling new musical production of the classic fantasy "The Wizard of Oz" on Wednesday, July 20 and again on Friday, July 22.

Tchaikovsky's magnificent ballet music and beautiful five-foot-tall rod puppets tell the most favorite of all fairy tales as the Pickwick Puppet Theatre performs "Sleeping Beauty" on Wednesday, Aug. 3.

No children's series would be complete without the Robert Louis Stevenson adventure tale, "Treasure Island." The Lorain Palace Players will set sail with this favorite high seas classic on Wednesday, Aug. 17.

Closing the season will be the Fanfare Theatre's production of "Annie Oakley & Buffalo Bill."

The Hanae Mori Fall Collection

Hanae Mori Fall Collection '77. Hanae Mori gives The Full Effect to an unstructured greatcoat in the lightweight lure of beige cashmere blend coordinated with the beige/ultraviolet wool knit tube.

As the highlight of her Fall Collection '77, the international designer Hanae Mori starts with the fullness of beautiful fabrics (cashmere, velvet, beige, crepe de chine) — then, with a sureness of color (garnet, amethyst, beige, star sapphire, ultraviolet) and an accent to the body (with sashes, with softness, with shadows) she creates a look of luxury that she calls

The Full Effect.
The Full Effect gives a woman a perfect combination for Fall. In lightweight/luxe fabrics, the layered look is there — with the accent on how it looks. An emphasis might be obvious — a vest, a sash, a belt. Or it might be subtle — the controlled fall of a blouse, the choice of a certain fabric because of its diaphanous quality. Madame Mori states: "There are times, daytime or evening, when a woman just won't wear sportswear. She tires of it. Or she wants to look particularly beautiful on a particular occasion. That's when she's ready for The Full Effect."

The Full Effect. This is Hanae Mori's answer to sportswear; this is what wonderful is all about.

hand beading, quilting in traditional patterns.

Standouts

The sexy, bias-cut, V-silhouette long black silk jersey with vertical metallic stripes. (Lombard would have loved it!)

The bare black taffeta dance dress with tiered skirt lined in ultraviolet, and its cover-up: the magnificent big-sleeve taffeta greatcoat with Pierrot collar and big bow.

The sensational silk chiffon silver and multicolor print ballgown with hand-beaded bodice, and its cover-up: the silver satin jacket quilted in the traditional Japanese wave pattern and lined in silk tulle.

The museum-piece crushed velvet A-line evening gown in black/silver/ruby/sapphire with square neck, gold lace trim. Its cover-up: the handknit black velvet chenille jacket.

The daring brushstroke print silk dress in white/black/grey that floats over black satin harem pants.

Ready to Wear

The Full Effect Blouson big-tops, bows at the neck,

Highlights

The Full Effect is one-of-a-kind ensembles for once-in-a-lifetime occasions. Long and short dressing with coordinated cover-ups. Gem-colored fabrics worth their weight in gold — silk, silk chiffon and satin; cut and crushed velvet; brocade organza; mousseline de soie; taffeta.

Prints inspired by traditional nature designs — fantasy flowers and butterflies and even snakes. Notable details are ribbon ties and border prints, gold lace and satin braid trims.

Childhood Preventatives

There is mounting interest in childhood preventatives against adult heart attacks, specifically in diagnosing abnormally high levels of cholesterol in children. Two Arizona physicians have devised a test to help find abnormal levels of cholesterol.

The test can be given to all children, whether they have a family history of high cholesterol or not.

Fall Collection '77: Hanae Mori presents The Full Effect in this blouson day-evening dress in sensuous silk crepe de chine. Navy/white/amethyst mountainflowers grow on a garnet ground.

blouse...or the evening tailor — tailored jacket, chiffon blouse and long full skirt. The smashing big-sleeve blouson tunic top over slim pants. Unstructured greatcoats in lightweight luxury fabrics, including cashmere. Unlined, easy-fitting, with hoods and big sleeves, in wrap or cape silhouettes. Solid colors: beige, black, burgundy or purple or jacquard prints.
